

Becoming a Private Healthcare Advocate

*11 Steps to a
New Career
in Healthcare*

This workshop is the first step toward credentialing in the exciting and rapidly emerging profession of private healthcare advocacy.

Hacienda del Sol Guest Ranch Resort
Tucson, AZ

March 20th and 21st, 2010
8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

What is Private Healthcare Advocacy?

As healthcare systems in the US become more complex, and access to appropriate healthcare continues to be more problematic, a new profession called private healthcare advocacy is emerging. Private healthcare advocates work independently with people of all ages, assisting them in navigating through complex medical systems.

The Need for Accreditation

Because there are currently no professional standards or requirements, consumers seeking the assistance of a private healthcare advocate have no reliable way to assess the expertise, ethics and business practices of an individual practitioner.

Healthcare Liaison has responded to this situation by creating the first credentialing process for private healthcare advocates. This course is designed as the first step toward that credential. Qualified participants who complete this course may inquire about additional requirements for credentialing.

Consumers are turning to private healthcare advocates for assistance with a number of healthcare related issues, including:

- New diagnoses
- Treatment options
- Care plans
- Case management
- Placement issues
- Insurance
- Community resources

Private healthcare advocates work directly for their clients and do not receive reimbursement from any other source.

Workshop Leader

The course will be taught by Joanna Smith, LCSW, MPH, Founder and CEO of Healthcare Liaison. She has 25 years experience in the fields of health, public health and mental health, working as a medical social worker and hospital discharge planner in healthcare systems throughout the San Francisco Bay Area. A former Director of medical social work and discharge planning at DRG in South San Francisco, Joanna also has training in utilization review and case management. Previous experience also includes work in home health and community-based agencies.

Joanna received her undergraduate degree at the University of Vermont (1970) and then received her Masters in Social Work degree from Tulane University in 1978. She also holds a Masters in Public Health degree from the University of California, Berkeley (1985) with a specialization in Maternal and Child Health.

In 2007 Joanna established the first credentialing program in the country for private healthcare advocates. In 2009 she founded the National Association of Healthcare Advocacy Consultants (www.nahac.com) and currently serves as NAHAC President.
